LIGHT OF HER LIFE

The late Lucile Barnett, a retired art teacher, painted a light-filled impression of First United Methodist Church in Little Rock back in 1962. But her faith journey there began more than 100 years ago when she was enrolled in the Cradle Department on the day of her birth.

In her final years at a local retirement community, Lucile's finances were as secure as her faith. The United Methodist Foundation of Arkansas was trustee for the Revocable Trust and Charitable Remainder Unitrust created by Lucile and her husband Rollin after a visit from Foundation President Jim Argue to their Bethel Sunday School Class at First Church.

Always a joy to others, Lucile enjoyed time with her friends, a weekly beauty shop visit and watching Rev. Vic Nixon on the Pulaski Heights UMC broadcasts every Sunday. When her earthly life was done, the Rollin and Lucile Barnett Memorial Endowment Fund was created to express the love they shared for the Church forever.

"I have faith in the Foundation," Lucile said in a 2007 interview. "They've been so good to us, and they've done everything we asked."

Conference Hopes to Launch Leaders Forward in Vision, Action

By Haley Walker Klein
UMFA Contributor

The city of Little Rock played host to more than 80 attendees at the Launch 2.0 experience in early October. Launch 2.0 is the second step of the Courageous Leadership Imperative (CLI), the brainchild of the late Jim Argue, past President and CEO of The United Methodist Foundation of Arkansas, and Tom Locke, President of the Texas Methodist Foundation (TMF). With support from the Lilly Endowment, TMF's Leadership Ministry team offers the CLI, a learning network for courageous leaders.

The first Launch conference, version 1.0, was held last year in St. Louis and offered a large group experience designed to create a network for dynamic leaders, expand imagination for what's possible, and embolden courage during times of change. The Launch 1.0 program was attended by 130 clergy members, including nine from Arkansas.

"When the organizers set out to plan Launch 2.0, they had learned from pastors that it would be helpful to have some of their team from their church with them," said the Rev. Lynn Kilbourne, senior pastor at FUMC North Little Rock and Launch 2.0 Design Team Leader. "Launch 2.0 participants were encouraged to bring two other people from their church with them. Ideally, the 'triads' would have a dreamer, influencer, and implementer. I was excited to bring two folks from my church with me- Rev. Annie Lankford, our Associate Pastor; and David Martin, Lay Leader."

"We Are Curio"- a design-centered innovation group from Florida- led the triads through their four-step innovation process called "IEDA." The four steps of IEDA are: Immerse, Expand, Design, Act, explained Kilbourne, "having my team together for the event allowed us to better ground our visioning and work with IEDA. It wasn't just an exercise in visioning, our time at Launch 2.0 has laid the groundwork for visioning that can happen in our local church. Together we learned that courageous leadership includes risky ideas and projects like transforming spaces and creating new ministries, but it also includes the work of creating a shared vision for a congregation."

"It was inspiring to learn from courageous leaders from Little Rock, including Skip Rutherford, Dean of the Clinton School of Public Service, and Dr. Sybil Jordan Hampton, a higher education administrator and philanthropist, said Kilbourne. "We were able to hear the exciting ministries happening in other churches, and be reminded of the power of the Holy Spirit to lead us to be courageous in our leadership and ministries." The Arkansas Conference Launch 2.0 attendees will meet in early November to discuss their program's next steps.

STORY IDEA?

A Little Corny, A Lot of Fun

By Caleb Hennington
Digital Content Editor, @arumceditor

Last month, The Arkansas Conference had a booth at the 6th annual Arkansas Cornbread Festival, a celebration of all things corny, that took place on Oct. 26 in the South Main neighborhood, one of the funkiest and fastest growing neighborhoods in Little Rock.

A few months prior, during one of our Center for Communication meetings, we were discussing ways to reach out to our community and let them know that the United Methodist Church is still alive and active in the state.

Because let's face it, the only people that know about the Arkansas Conference are the people that work there, our clergy, and our lay leaders (some of our own Methodist members don't even know we exist!)

I suggested we look at the annual Cornbread Festival for a few reasons: it's one of the most popular festivals in Little Rock, it's fun and unique, and it's right down the road from our office at Philander Smith College.

We decided to give away some swag (stickers, buttons and magnets featuring the newly redesigned Conference logo) and pass out information on United Methodist churches in the surrounding area.

But we still had one big question that we didn't yet know how to answer: how would we get people to actually come to our tent and talk to us?

To be honest, most people aren't coming to the festival to talk to religious folks, much less find a home church in their neighborhood.

That's when the idea for a dog photo booth came up; what if we had another reason for people to visit us? Something that could potentially lead to questions about church and faith?

Or not! We weren't really concerned with "evangelizing" to folks who were there trying to hang out with their family and eat some authentic Arkansas cornbread.

And I'm proud to say that our photo booth was a big success! We had so many happy pet owners stop by that it was hard to keep up with at times!

Even though we only spoke to a few people about churches, we came away from that weekend knowing we had accomplished our goals.

We were visible in the community. We brought people joy through our dog photo booth. We gave away some conference swag. We had fun.

It's not always about reaching as many people as you can with the message of Christ. You can't approach everyone with that mindset; that your only job is to preach the gospel. You have to establish a relationship first. You have to be approachable.

True connections, real relationships often lead to deeper discussions. I think we need to start with that before catching someone off guard with faith talks.

We're not done with festivals, either. We'll be hitting up a few more in the spring.

So come by and see us if you live in the Little Rock area! Our experiment might work so well that we branch out to other areas of the conference.

In the meantime, we're just happy knowing that we were able to spread a little extra joy in the world.

Pray, Pray and Pray More

By Bishop Gary Mueller
Bishop of the Arkansas Conference

I am writing these words from Bupyeong Methodist Church in Incheon, South Korea as part of my role as chair of the Path 1 Strategy Committee that seeks to enable the creation of new faith communities in the United Methodist Church. It is 6:15 am, and I have just returned to my room in the church's guest house from an hour-long 5:00 am daily prayer service attended by almost 600 people.

The Methodist Church in Korea is vital and vibrant. While it faces its own set of unique challenges like the church everywhere, it is transforming lives, communities and the world. Perhaps most importantly, however, it is built on prayer. Frequent prayer. Powerful prayer. And in particular, a unique style of early morning prayer called Tongkung Kido, which means "cry out together loudly."

While prayer has always been important to me, I confess I recently have been re-formed in my prayer life because of three distinct experiences. First, I engaged in a deep conversation with someone on the conference staff about my vague sense that in these troubled times we need a major reboot that can only be achieved through prayer. Second, an individual in a conversation I convened about how we might find a way forward in Arkansas passionately articulated how the most important thing we can do right now is to gather together to pray, confess our sins and repent. And, third, my experience of praying out loud for 30 minutes every morning with others has stirred my soul greatly.

Prayer is not something that a bishop can mandate. It's not a checklist to be completed. Nor is it another program to be implemented. Prayer happens because you take the time to do it and discover how the Holy Spirit enables you to pray more deeply, honestly and authentically than you ever imagined possible.

So here is my dream. Every pastor and every lay person will start out by praying 10 minutes a day. Small groups of people will gather - including groups of non-like minded people - to pray, confess and listen to God. And more and more people will join together to engage in transformational prayer as we open our hearts to God, intercede on behalf of others, the church and the world, and are deeply touched by God's speaking to us.

If you are willing to do this, I would like to hear from you. If you are willing to share your experiences, I would love to hear about them. If you want me to pray for you as the Holy Spirit moves me, I want to know. Email me at bishop@arumc.org.

I'm not sure where all of this will lead us. But I know this. It is the most hope-full thing we can do in a world that has gone amuck, a church that is struggling and lives that are filled with brokenness. God will give us exactly what we need. And we will be amazed by what happens.

We're revolutionizing the church website game. Again.

We know how hard it can be to make a good church website, and that's why we're now using Weebly to provide our Arkansas Conference churches with websites that are easier to design and maintain than ever before. All it takes is undergoing one of our new Conference Communications Audits. Both are free; paid for with your Conference Tithe. So why not sign up today, and start thinking differently about your church's communications?

Feeding from the Depths

By Rev. Eva Englert-Jessen
Program Coordinator for the Center for Calling and Christian Leadership, Hendrix College

I'm not sure I'd be a minister today if it weren't for church potlucks. There is something about the gelatinous salads, mac and cheese, quirky cupboard serving bowls and potluck conversation that nourishes the soul. I think Jesus knew what he was doing when he told us that coming together around simple elements -- brought forth as wheat and grape from creation and nurtured into bread and wine -- is a profound way to experience God's love, and to be challenged to extend that holy Table into the world.

Food matters. Food really matters.

Churches have played a tremendous role in responding to the needs of the hungry, through a variety of food programs such as weekly meals for anyone in need in the community, summer meal programs for schoolchildren, and food pantries. This work is important; it shouldn't stop. And yet, as helpful and theologically grounded (and important!) as food charity is, I've learned more and more that the complexity of problems related to food injustice and poverty require an even more robust response from the church; responses that get at the heart of the issues themselves.

Two of my favorite food justice authors Roger Gottlieb and Anapuma Joshi define food justice in terms of equity, fairness, and sustainability not only for consumers and eaters, but also in terms of how food is grown, produced, and accessed. If the food systems that create hunger are characterized by a lack of equity and fairness in any of these areas, then to respond in a meaningful way necessitates paying attention to the interaction of all of these components of food injustice.

I wonder about possibilities for deeper engagement in our Arkansas Methodist churches around this. There are so many ways to do this work creatively! Examining the roots is hard, and time-consuming, and requires asking questions that don't always have straightforward answers or quick fixes—but is that not the road of faith we walk in our personal lives and with our fellow Christians? The task Jesus gives us to love God and love neighbor is not an easy task, but it is one we do in community.

One such example of this examination of the roots is situated in uncovering the history of lands we live on, and the ways throughout history and into our present in which land has been used to exploit God's creation—both the land and the people—who were forced leave or to work it. As I'm learning from teachers and writers such as Dr. Cherisse Jones-Branch of Arkansas State University, Arkansas is not exempt from a past that not only enslaved Africans and their descendants, but that also upheld many programs (including programs connected to the U.S. Department of Agriculture) that continued to deny African-Americans the right to land ownership even after the abolishment of slavery. We can draw a pretty direct line from this history to the reality of what many experts call “food deserts,” where lack of access to fresh, healthy foods is clustered in specific geographic areas. Communities affected by land loss and food deserts are in or near our churches. I feel God calling us to dive more deeply into the realities that affect their abilities to live the abundant life into which Jesus calls us.

Some might read this and think I'm being “political,” a word that has become so demonized in our age of partisan polarization. But I believe that the God who calls us all to partner in what John Wesley would describe as God's work of reconciling all of creation, calls us to reckon with the ways in which we humans are capable of both great compassion and kindness and great harm. I think this reckoning sometimes involves zeroing in on the nitty-gritty layers and systems that we move through, even when we'd much rather not look at them at all.

Even as we dive more deeply into the causes of hunger and the ways in which poverty ensnares so many in our communities, let's not forget the abundant grace of God that is always present, always reaching out, always inviting us into deeper relationship with Christ, one another, and with the Holy Spirit that dwells within each of us. As we gather around Fellowship Hall tables for potlucks and approach a season of holiday meals and gatherings, may we be transformed by meals of grace and the Meal of Grace we partake in as Christians during Communion. May we also extend that grace into each person, creature, and moment we encounter.

Rev. Eva Englert-Jessen (Hendrix '12, Boston University School of Theology '17) is a provisional Deacon in the North Texas Conference of the UMC. She is serving in Arkansas as the Program Coordinator for the Center for Calling and Christian Leadership. The Center, which is based at Hendrix College, creates programs for young United Methodists to explore and discern their calls to lay and ordained ministry and church leadership.

Eva is passionate about the intersections of vocation, faith, and justice—especially related to food and the environment. As a Deacon, she is also committed to supporting and creating spaces for the church (broadly defined) to be a source of personal and social transformation.

Advent Sparks Light at Methodist Family Health

By Amy Shores

Director of Pastoral Care, Methodist Family Health

I have a pretty unpopular opinion. Unlike what feels like 95% of the population, Christmas is not my favorite holiday. I'm more of an Easter kind of girl. Give me spring, give me pastels and coconut candy and dyed eggs, not to mention the joyous and triumphant celebrations that happen in churches on Easter Sunday morning, and I'm happy. However, that being said, my affinity for Advent has started to grow during my time with Methodist Family Health.

I'm beginning to like Christmas more and more because of the amazing things that I am able to experience each year during the season. In October, we start looking for families, individuals, Sunday School classes and youth groups to "adopt a wish list." Those in our care all have the chance to create a Christmas wish list, so we need donors and shoppers who are willing to turn those wishes into realities. Between our residential treatment facilities, our hospital in Maumelle, our day schools, our CARES program, our group homes, and a few of our outpatient clinics, we provided Christmas wish lists for more than 200 individuals last year. So, beginning in October, I have the chance to start talking with all of the wonderful donors who make this happen.

Once donors are in place, I get to move on to collecting wish lists! It's so fun listening to kids' dreams and getting excited about gifts—more than once I've had kids tell me this is the first time they've been able to have a list like this. Once lists are done, I pass them on to donors who shop and then drop-off gifts, and then myself and other volunteers process them with a giant two-day wrapping extravaganza. My last step in our gift process is delivering the gifts to our facilities, where they are opened on Christmas morning!

Along with all of the gifts, we also have a variety of parties and programs at all of our different facilities, and I make it my goal to be at as many of them as I can! I have to admit, though, that I have a favorite Christmas activity when it comes to Methodist Family Health. Our CARES moms, who are our ladies in treatment for mental illness and addiction, create not only a wish list for themselves, but they also make a list for each of their children. Instead of wrapping their kids' gifts at our big volunteer wrapping event, we set the CARES kids' gifts aside and they get to have their own party, where we have snacks, listen to Christmas music, and the moms set to work preparing gifts for their children. I will never forget walking into the wrapping room last year to find a mom sitting in the middle of a stack of presents, sobbing. When I asked her what was wrong, she told me that she had never had this many gifts for her children and that she had never once wrapped them. Her recovery was giving her the chance to provide something for her kids (and honestly, for herself) that she had always wanted.

It was more than just her recovery that provided this chance, however. It was the UMW group that provided the party, it was the donors who bought the gifts, and it was the continued generosity of Arkansas United Methodists that help our programs continue to exist. If you are interested in adopting a wish-list, in helping wrap gifts, in providing a Christmas party, or in some other way helping volunteer and bring Christmas to the kids at Methodist Family Health, we would love to have your participation.

Please contact Amy Shores at ashores@methodistfamily.org. Wish lists will be ready before Black Friday, and we need all gifts back by Dec. 13, in order to get them wrapped and delivered!

Q&A w/ Danielle Adkisson

Tell me about yourself: Where you're from, where you live now, where you went to school, your previous jobs, etc.

I'm originally from Sherwood and graduated high school from Sylvan Hills. I received my degree in Dietetics from U of A-Fayetteville and now live in Conway with my husband and our four furbabies. I taught preschool for eight years before entering my position at Conway First UMC.

What attracted you to the Executive Assistant to the Bishop position?

As an ambitious Methodist woman in administration, what wouldn't attract me to this position?! The challenges, getting to work day in and day out with the Bishop, becoming "the woman behind the scenes" and connecting with everyone in our conference...all of which drew me in.

What are you most looking forward to in your new role?

That is a difficult question to answer because I'm looking forward to it all!

What do you like to do when you're not at work?

When I am not at work you will find me in my backyard with my dogs, on a hiking trail with my husband, in the gym, with my tribe of incredible friends or curled up with a cup of coffee & a good book.

United Methodist Churches in Magnolia Have Worked to Make Students Feel Comfortable at SAU

College students gather for fellowship with a local United Methodist Church in Magnolia. In 2017, in a span of about two weeks, two students at Southern Arkansas University in Magnolia committed suicide on campus. In response to the tragedy, Dan Read, the pastor at Greers Chapel United Methodist Church, began a program to pair college students with local families.

“I know what it is like to move far from home and not know anyone in your new environment,” Read said. “So we sent out a school-wide email to all students to let them know about this program and while they are here at Magnolia, we had mentors that would be here for them too.”

He said he quickly realized it was more than what his small church could handle. He said in the first year, there were 20 students wanting to take part, but he only had 12 sponsor families. Other churches have joined the program, including Emerson United Methodist and Magnolia First United Methodist.

“Having someone to turn to, outside the college, and knows the area, especially in the case of international students, and knows the culture here in south Arkansas, has been extremely beneficial,” Read said. “I know that some of my host families have done everything from taking students out to eat, letting them do laundry at their house and helping them with transportation to and from school.”

He said the main goal of the program is to build relationships between sponsor families and the students. He said most communicate about once a month in person or through emails and phone calls.

“I know that I was unique and when I went to churches, I looked and asked for a mentor,” Read said. “Students don’t really go to churches and ask for help. I thought we could offer that kind of help to them.

“That email that was sent out to every student, it was crucial. I am excited to see it continue to grow over the years.”

David Spradlin, who is on the board of the Wesley Foundation at SAU, was initially hesitant in adopting a college student. “I told (Dan), I had so much going on, that he needed to leave me out of this program,” Spradlin said.

However, when the need for foster families was not being met, Spradlin said he reluctantly joined and adopted two students last year. He enjoyed it so much, he took on six this year.

“We try to meet with them once every two to three weeks,” Spradlin said. “My wife and I contact them at least once during that time – they all have our number.”

“It works pretty well. We tend to do it around meals, usually by going to a meal with them. They are all on board, which is kind of what we hoped for. Most of the students don’t live here, so it is a chance to go eat a meal and visit with someone, that isn’t a teacher or another student.”

“Sometimes, we will have them over at the house and I will grill steaks or some kind of meal for them.”

Read said he appreciates how members of his congregation are involved and invested in the lives of people who are different by generation and by race. “That has been neat to see, the racial diversity, so cross-race boundaries are being broken too,” Read said.

Read said the neat thing about it is how other schools and towns have become interested in the project as well. He said it is a program that could be picked up across the state, connecting churches with college students.

“We are supposed to help them with their challenges,” Spradlin said. “I’m not rich, but I’m fairly well off. I’m well enough to take six college students out for lunch every couple of weeks.”

“We deal with challenges, but as college students, the crises they have are bigger.” He said if his car breaks down, he has to take it to the shop and have it repaired, but if a student’s car breaks down, “that might be the end of the world for them.”

“Whatever the challenges are, we will try to do what we can to help,” Spradlin said. “I think they are looking for someone they can trust and feel comfortable with and not looking to use them in some way.”

“We want to be a safe place.”

Read said it has been a little hard to get people to buy into the program.

“It is not a huge investment, to spend a lunch with a student, it can make all the difference for that student,” he said.

“I think it is doing what it should be doing,” Spradlin said. “I think it does some good, I really do.”

“I have six students and one of them really needs help or assistance and that’s the one you worry about. I worry about the one falling through the crack because you don’t want to lose anyone. Out of the eight that we have dealt with, probably two of them really needed a friend and those are the two that I am here for.”

Pulaski Heights Has Expanded Their Pet Ministry to Include Grief Support, Educational Classes, and More

By Caleb Hennington
Digital Content Editor, @arumceditor

This past year, Pulaski Heights United Methodist Church's therapy dog training program was so popular, they were forced to put dozens of potential therapy pups and their trainers on a waiting list.

"Every time we put the word out that we were doing another class, the list would fill up immediately," said Gayle Fiser, Pet Ministry Coordinator at Pulaski Heights.

Fiser said the waitlist grew so large, they had to expand their classes into the summer. The spring and fall, seasons when the classes would normally take place, weren't cutting it anymore.

As the church heads into 2020, they are now looking at offering more than just therapy dog training; beginning in November, the church is launching a full pet ministry expansion that covers every facet of a pet owner and their furry friends' lives.

The church is launching three new components to their pet ministry. In addition to therapy dog training in the spring and fall, Pulaski Heights is offering Care and Support for Pet Owners, Community Service and Educational Programs, and Animal Events.

Each one of these components is intended to break down the traditional barriers placed between pets, their owners, and the church, and find ways to incorporate pets fully into the lives of the church community.

"One of the most important pieces of this expansion is Care and Support for Pet Owners. This will be a support system for pet owners who have pets that are sick or have recently died," Fiser said. "We have a connect card on our church bulletin that has different things you can check for care and support, and we'll be adding 'pet illness' as a box to be checked if you need prayers for your pet."

Pulaski Heights is also looking to hand out pet prayer blankets, similar to prayer shawls, that Fiser says will let pets know they are surrounded by love and prayers.

"They'll be made out of fleece instead of a crocheted blanket, that way they are lightweight and soft, and their nails won't get Graduates of the therapy dog training program offered by Pulaski Heights United Methodist Church pose for a group photo after being introduced at Sunday morning services at the church. caught in them.”

Fiser shared two different examples of how she has seen prayer blankets help sick pets and their families through difficult times. In one instance, the pet had been mauled and seriously injured, but miraculously recovered. Fiser said the family attributes the recovery to the prayers that they and their pet received, and the healing power of the prayer blanket.

In another example, a pet was very sick and passed away, but the prayer blanket that was given to their pet was still a comfort to the family during the illness.

“That prayer blanket was very meaningful to the family, and they kept the blanket even after their pet had died,” Fiser said.

Another aspect of the Care and Support Ministry is offering comfort during a situation where a pet has to be put down by a vet.

“I or someone else can go with the owner to the vet to support them and be able to bless the pet before it is put down. The owner can also call the church office on their way to the vet, and drive by the church parking lot to have their pets blessed on the way to the vet,” Fiser said.

The Pet Ministry has found ways to comfort pet owners in other ways as well, like pet-specific prayer cards that they can mail or hand out to people with a sick, injured, or dying pet.

“There’s a part of that pet prayer that says ‘we feel a deep sense of loss over the death of our beloved pet that others may not understand,’ and I think that’s an important phrase because pet owners are hurting and we validate their pain.”

Fiser said they have already heard from pet owners that the prayer card has made a huge difference to them during the grieving process.

“We gave this card to a pet owner whose pet had recently passed away, and they put that prayer card next to a picture of their pet in their home. They found a lot of comfort in that simple prayer. It was helpful to them to know that someone cared,” Fiser said.

“So many people feel guilty about being sad about their pet dying because society makes them think that it’s insignificant and they should not be having these deep feelings of loss over a pet. But when we acknowledge that grief, it's a relief to them. It lets them know it's OK to feel sad."

For the Community Service and Educational Programs aspect of the expansion, Fiser and others are asking pet owners what they would like to see this part of the ministry turn into.

"We may look at setting up adoption events at local animal shelters," she said.

Educational programs are also being planned for the future and may involve having expert speakers come and talk to pet owners about a wide range of topics, such as addressing and stopping bad behaviors in a pet or how to introduce children to a new family animal.

"We might even bring in a professional photographer that can show you how to take the best photos of your pet!" Fiser said.

Building an online resource for pet owners is something that Fiser is hoping can happen in the future. By filming or live streaming the lectures and hosting them on Pulaski Heights' website, they can open up their ministry to young families who might be too busy with work or taking care of their children and pets to attend

Remington, pictured above, and his owner the Rev. Candace Barron went through therapy dog training at PHUMC. Now, they travel around to area nursing homes and hospitals to visit people and offer comfort to those who need it most. || Photo provided by Candace Barron a lecture in person.

Animals Events, the third aspect of the ministry, has already been implemented by Pulaski Heights thanks to their annual Blessing of the Animals, which takes place every October at the church's Hillcrest campus.

The Blessing of the Animals celebrates the birthday of St. Francis of Assisi, the patron saint for ecologists who had an unending passion for animals and nature. Each year, people are invited to bring their pet -- whether that's a cat, dog or even a turtle -- and have them blessed by a member of the clergy at PHUMC.

Pulaski Heights' original pet ministry, therapy dog training, is also looking to continue to grow in 2020.

The Rev. Candace Barron and her standard poodle, Remington, are two recent graduates of the Pulaski Heights' therapy dog training.

"I originally went through the training with Remington because I thought it was a great program, but I also saw it as something that I could start at my church as well," Barron said.

Barron is the pastor of two churches in North Little Rock; Amboy UMC and Gardner Memorial UMC.

She said Remington is a rescue and was very shy when she first adopted him, but the training at PHUMC helped him to be more confident around people and dogs he's never met.

Since going through the training and receiving a certification, Remington and Barron travel to the VA Hospital in North Little Rock each month to visit the patients there, as well as some of the area nursing homes. Remington is able to bring comfort and serve the patients in both the hospital and nursing homes.

“People in nursing homes and veterans hospitals are often dog lovers, but they can’t have a dog where they are. So being able to be around a dog again, even if just for a little while, makes them so happy and you can tell it brings them so much joy,” Barron said.

Fiser said when she counted up every event the therapy dogs had helped with throughout the year -- from visiting nursing homes, hospitals, and Alzheimer’s patients at home to events like Blue Christmas -- she found that the dogs had put in more than 206 hours of service. Fiser said one of the reasons the idea for a pet ministry has been embraced at Pulaski Heights is because of the church’s clergy who see this as a way to reach people -- specifically, pet owners -- that the church has not yet reached.

“We’re blessed to have an associate pastor -- Rev. Betsy Singleton Snyder -- who has embraced this ministry and sees it as cutting edge in the church,” Fiser said. “All of this is kind of her brainchild; you know, having pets in worship. And our other pastors have embraced it as well since starting our therapy dog training.

“With the pet ministry, I think God is guiding us along through this and we just need to be smart enough to follow.”

Personally, Fiser feels a special attachment to the pet ministry. Not only has she worked with churches to bring pet ministries to two different United Methodist congregations in Arkansas, but she’s also a pet lover herself.

“The part of this that means the most to me is the care and support that we can now offer pet owners. When you have a seriously ill pet or have lost a pet, you understand the need for comfort. It’s such a big part of your life. It’s going to mean so much to people that the church now ministers to that wound and that pain. It just means a lot.”

Loving God,
Our pets share our hearts and home and quickly become family. They bring laughter, joy, and unconditional love into our lives.

Then, the house is suddenly quiet and still. Oh God, our hearts hurt and we feel a deep sense of loss over the death of our beloved pet that others may not understand. Grant us strength and peace and healing. Amen.

An example of a prayer for the loss of a pet. This is just one of the ways PHUMC is expanding their Pet Ministry to include grief and care support for pet owners.

A collection of approximately 15 lit candles, each housed in a hollowed-out coconut shell. The shells are arranged in a scattered pattern across the frame, with some overlapping. The flames are bright yellow and orange, casting a warm, golden glow. The background is a solid, deep black, which makes the light from the candles stand out prominently. The overall composition is dense and textured, with the natural, fibrous appearance of the coconut shells visible.

Bishop Kenneth and Elaine Hicks

Kenneth William Hicks
June 18, 1923 - June 19, 2019

Bishop Kenneth William Hicks, 96, died Wednesday, June 19, at his home in Shepherd's Cove in Little Rock midst his wife and family. He was born as the only child of Earl and Ertie Hicks on June 18, 1923, near Iola, KS, and graduated from high school in 1941. During the early years of World War II, he worked in a Nashville TN airplane factory where bombers were built.

Eventually, he attended junior college, after which he enrolled at York College (NE), completing a B.A. degree. He then enrolled at Iliff School of Theology in Denver, earning his Master of Theology in 1953. Ordained a Deacon in 1952 and an Elder in 1953, Hicks served Methodist churches in Colorado for seven years, and then later in Nebraska including five years as a District Superintendent.

Rev. Hicks met his lovely wife Elaine in college and they married in 1946. From then until he died last Wednesday, they were one another's counsel in all matters.

Hicks was elected to the United Methodist episcopacy in 1976, first serving the Little Rock and North Arkansas Conferences (merging in 2002 to become the Arkansas Conference). While in Arkansas he established an excellent record of credibility and gained a respectable reputation for leadership in human relations, justice issues, and a respect for life. He was also called as a plaintiff to testify against the legislation that would have allowed Creation Science to be taught in Arkansas public schools, which was eventually repealed.

In 1984, Bishop Hicks was assigned to the Kansas Episcopal Area, which included the Kansas East and Kansas West Conferences. Again he served for eight years, prodding and challenging the pastors, District Superintendents and laity in his care to innovative and effective approaches to ministry. While there, a Kansas church-affiliated hospital came into a negotiated sale arrangement to a private corporate entity. Though he walked into the developing stages of this sale in his first months in the state, he presided over the consummation of a matter seething with controversy. The hospital is still operating under the name Wesley Medical Center. After retirement, Hicks served on the board of Kansas Health Foundation for eleven years.

In 1992, Ken and Elaine retired back to Arkansas, where he was given an office in Little Rock's PHUMC as Bishop in Residence. Though retired, his services were always in demand and his commitment to issues and causes close to his heart continued to beckon. Ken Hicks served as a member of Arkansas Friends for Better Schools, Arkansas Advocates for Children and Families, Governor's Partnership Council for Children and Families, Advisory Council of Carelink, Interfaith Caregivers Alliance, Bishops' Initiative on Children and Poverty, and the Arkansas Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty. He was also a docent at the Clinton Presidential Library, a member of the Steering Committee of Arkansas Interfaith Power and Light. And for several years he was part time director of Ministries of Methodist Family Health.

Ken Hicks' active ministry included membership on the General Board of Church and Society, and the General Board of Global Ministries being chair of the National Division. Committee chairmanships on these boards included Peace with Justice and Chair of the Advisory Committee on Korean Ministry, among others. Notably, Bishop Hicks was in the forefront of the Peace Ministry at PHUMC begun in 2002 focusing on peacemaking and reconciliation. Many of his writings and thoughts were collected, edited and published in a book entitled "Peace Flowing Like a River" in 2010.

Hicks was granted honorary degrees from Nebraska Wesleyan University, Westmar College, Philander Smith College, Hendrix College, and Baker University. He also served on the Board of Trustees at the latter three schools plus St. Paul School of Theology, Southwestern University, Kansas Wesleyan University, and S. M. U. in Dallas. He also served as a Trustee for Mount Sequoyah Assembly, Youthville Inc., Lydia Patterson Institute in El Paso, Methodist Hospital in Memphis, and Friendly Acres Retirement Center.

His many awards included Civil Libertarian of the Year by the ACLU-Arkansas (1984); the Senator David Pryor Award (1997) for Community Service by CareLink; the Ethel K. Miller Award for Religion and Social Awareness by Hendrix College (1999); and he and Elaine received the Hospice Foundation of Arkansas Compassion Award (1999). He also received a Distinguished Alumnus Award from Iliff School of Theology.

Ken is survived by his lovely wife Elaine, who shared their incredible life journey. And they have been proud parents of two very accomplished daughters, Linda Hicks and Debra Gottschalk, who with the late Wayne Gottschalk parented Ken and Elaine's very special grandchildren: Kiley and Spencer. Ken was predeceased by a multitude of beloved pets including Danny.

A special thank you goes out to Ken's caregivers – Andrew, Curtis, Debbie, John, LaTonia, Lucille and T.J., with an appreciative nod to Arkansas Hospice.

A Memorial Service of Resurrection and Thanksgiving to God for Bishop Hicks was held on Friday, June 28, in the sanctuary of Pulaski Heights United Methodist Church, 4823 Woodlawn, Little Rock 72205. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made in his memory to the Bishop Kenneth W. Hicks Peace Endowment at PHUMC; Methodist Family Health, 1600 Aldersgate Road #200, Little Rock 72205; or the Kansas Health Foundation at 309 E. Douglas Ave., Wichita, KS 67202. Funeral arrangements were under the direction of Ruebel Funeral Home, www.ruebelfuneralhome.com.

Lila Elaine Hicks

March 30, 1926 - June 29, 2019

Lila Elaine Hicks was born in Scottsbluff, NE, March 30, 1926 and died June 29, 2019, at her home in Little Rock AR. Elaine was predeceased by her husband, Bishop Kenneth Hicks, and son-in-law, Wayne Gottschalk. Her survivors are daughters Debra Gottschalk of Topeka KS, Linda Hicks of Cabot AR, granddaughter Dr. Kiley Gottschalk (Oren Lee-Parritz) of Waltham, MA, grandson Spencer Gottschalk of Topeka, KS. She became a true Nebraska girl, living in cities throughout the state under the loving gaze of her mother, Martha Magnolia (Nolia) and an abundance of grandparents, aunts, uncles, and cousins who helped define and shape her into a woman who cherished "family". While attending York College in York, Nebraska, where she pursued teacher education curriculum, she attended an event, in the Fall of 1945, where a student by the name of Ken Hicks was the Master of Ceremonies. She mentioned to a friend she rather liked him. Two days later he called her, they went on a date, became engaged in November 1945 and were married August 11, 1946. After being married nearly 73 years, they decided it was going to last.

The life of a minister's wife was one of adapting, listening, extrapolating, being creative, being objective, being politically correct, knowing and being social ...all while modeling love, grace, intelligence, wisdom and discipline for her daughters, so they could become the best people they could be. With passion, organization and fortitude, she orchestrated the residential moves which occurred about every four years into parsonages in a variety of floor plans and conditions and communities of various personalities. Working was necessary, so she became a Jill of many trades...a dental assistant, a doctor assistant, a kindergarten teacher, an administrative assistant...and a Master of all. Her love of music and wonderful organizational skills enhanced many roles in the churches.

In the role of a Bishop's wife, she added another job to her resume. Her support of Ken, through facilitating meetings for Bishops and spouses, organizing conference events, organizing Ken for travel...and life, actually..., providing counsel to him, and participating in all facets of the Episcopal wife's duties rounded out the job description.

When the grandchildren were born, life became even richer for her. She guided them with love and joy, becoming the MaaMaw these children needed to navigate this life.

Elaine belonged to many civic and church organizations, including being part of the first group of people serving as proud volunteers at the Clinton Presidential Center and being a member of P.E.O. Through these opportunities, she brought cherished, enduring friendships into her circle of life's abundant gifts.

Animals...she loved them all, from rescued baby birds to feral cats to not feral cats, to butterflies, to parrots, to dogs. Abby, her rag doll guardian cat of the last 5 years, was a magical gift, a touchstone for Elaine in good, bad and "It's OK" times, a spirit dashing between bedrooms, care-taking her beloved people.

A village of people walked with Elaine through the last phase of her life, including caregivers Andrew, Celeste, Curtis, Debbie, John, Latonia, Lucille, TJ, and Arkansas Hospice. The family offers profound appreciation for the respect, kindness, generosity and compassionate care she was given.

Elaine Hicks was probably more than anyone knew, almost always giving the stage, the credit to her successful husband. However, he would not have been who he was or what he accomplished...nor would her children and grandchildren... without this woman of intelligence, resilience, wisdom, humor, and love...a river of deep, generous love.

In lieu of flowers the family suggests donations be made to organizations close to Elaine's heart:

Bishop Kenneth W Hicks Peace Endowment at PHUMC, 4823 Woodlawn Drive, Little Rock 72205

An animal rescue organization of your choice.

A celebration service honoring Elaine's life as she transitioned and a service of thanksgiving and resurrection for her husband, Kenneth Hicks, were intertwined, as were they, at Pulaski Heights United Methodist Church on Friday, June 28, 2019.

Euba Mae Harris-Winton

June 26, 1923 - March 11, 2019

Euba was born in June 1923 and died Monday, March 11, 2019. Ms. Euba's achievements and activism are too many to share in one post but here are a few of the many things she accomplished within her community and the United Methodist Church.

From 1970 to 1997, Harris-Winton supervised the Mallalieu Community Development Center, which was part of the Mallalieu Methodist Church. The church's history stretches back to 1886, and Harris-Winton's father pastored at that church for several years in the early 1900s.

Euba served on numerous conference and district committees throughout her lifetime. At the time of her death, Euba was a member of Mission UMC and participated in St. Paul UMC's United Methodist Women.

The Lincoln Echo, May 2001 Edition wrote the following: Her achievements, recognition, and awards could fill a book and would make for some very inspiring reading. In fact, the book entitled, Two Centuries of Methodism in Arkansas 1800-2000 by Nancy Britton, makes reference to Euba numerous times, as follows:

And the book "Our Father: Where Are the Fathers?" wrote this about Euba: Because of her ministry to all God's children in the city of Fort Smith, AR, in particular, and the state of Arkansas in general, Euba Mae Harris-Winton, a Black Community developer with the General Board of Global Ministries of the UMC, was named one of the 10 matriarchs of Arkansas in 1989.

Funeral arrangements for Mrs. Euba Mae Harris-Winton were Tuesday, March 19, 2019, at First United Methodist Church, 200 N. 15th Street, Fort Smith, Arkansas 72901.

Visitation was Monday, March 18, 2019, from 5-6 p.m. at the mortuary.

Jimmie T. Ames

March 12, 1925 - September 16, 2019

Jimmie Dell Tillman Ames died peacefully at her home on September 16, 2019, at the age of 94.

Jimmie was born on March 12, 1925 at Fort Roots in North Little Rock, Arkansas, to J.R. and Ada (Smith) Tillman. She grew up on a peach farm near London, Arkansas, and graduated from Clarksville High School. Jimmie attended College of the Ozarks in Clarksville as well as Hendrix College in Conway. In 1940, she was voted Johnson County Peach Queen (Queen Elberta III), and in 1941, Jimmie (appropriately) won the title of Smile Girl of the Ozarks.

Jimmie married the Rev. G.B. Ames on November 12, 1943, and together they raised two sons and a daughter. Supporting her husband's ministry as a Methodist minister, Jimmie resided in a number of Arkansas towns over the years: Conway, Paragould, Clarendon, Paris, Siloam Springs, Helena, Farmington, and Fayetteville, as well as Dallas and Louisville, Texas. After her husband's death, she settled in Fayetteville where she began work as an office manager for Dr. Joe Henley, and subsequently for Dr. Richard Roblee at Roblee Orthodontics until her retirement in 2007 at the age of 82.

Jimmie was a longtime member of Central United Methodist Church, where she taught the Asbury Sunday School class for over 20 years.

Jimmie was preceded in death by her parents, her husband, her brother George Tillman, her sister Mary Louise Keeling, and her two sons, Scott Ames and Steve Ames. She is survived by her daughter, Darla Kordsmeier (Larry), her five granddaughters, Kerri Johnson (Mike), Mindy Smith (Stacey), Courtney Hart (Dan), Frankie Fortune (Dale), and Lindsey Ames, as well as 10 great-grandchildren.

Jimmie Dell Tillman Ames endured many trials and difficulties in this life. When asked recently how she could remain so joyful in spite of such hardships, she replied, "Only with the help of the Lord Jesus." Jimmie's faith in the Lord Jesus was the source of her strength and joy. She was always looking for ways to lighten others' loads and to bring peace, joy and light into their lives. One well-known quote asks, "Has ever anyone made so much music in the world by merely passing through it?" Jimmie brought music, love and fun to the lives of everyone she encountered. She will be greatly missed by her family and friends, but we rejoice in the knowledge of God's promise that we will see her again.

On Easter Sunday, 1981 she and Larry D. Powell were married in the Oaklawn United Methodist Church in Hot Springs, Ark., and together, they pastored United Methodist churches in Hot Springs, Little Rock, Malvern, El Dorado, and Lakewood (NLR) until retiring in 2005. She was a consummate "parsonette" singing in choirs, playing handbells, working at the Dorcas House, attending Community Bible Study groups, delivering Meals on Wheels, hosted countless dinners and meetings, visited in hospitals and homes, enjoyed the company of a multitude of friends, and brightened any place or occasion simply by her presence. She had a delicate, tender heart, loving soul, tireless devotion, happy countenance, was extremely polite, never met a stranger, and would never withhold a compliment. She loved needlepoint, reading, being with her pets, and had an exceptional, childlike enthusiasm about Christmas. She loved her family and ALWAYS sent cards for special occasions. She was incapable of being critical, adversarial, or negative. She prayed regularly, read her Bible daily, and believed with all her heart that God would hold her securely in his arms in death just as He had in life. She was, in the words of an old song, "A Jewel Here on Earth, a Jewel in Heaven."

She is survived by her husband, Larry of 38 years, her children, Tammi Miller Herren and Stan Miller; two stepsons, Bryan Powell and Wade Powell; 10 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

A private family graveside was conducted at Crestlawn Memorial Park in Conway and a Memorial service followed Monday, June 3 at Lakewood United Methodist Church in North Little Rock with a visitation following in the church fellowship hall.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to the Lakewood United Methodist Church in North Little Rock.

Across Generations

By Melinda Shunk
Children's Ministry Coordinator

Children's ministry can sometimes be thought of as a ministry ONLY for those parents raising young children to serve. It is a great misconception and one that leaves out so much love and experience that intergenerational volunteers who are done raising young children can offer to our children. A group of multi-generational volunteers is able to give time and experience to a children's ministry that should never be doubted or denied.

Brenda Wright taught in public school in Louisiana for 28 years and retired to Monticello, Arkansas in the Southeast District. She volunteered in children's ministry for five years at First UMC of Monticello, until most recently her senior pastor, the Rev. Hammett Evans, asked her to join the staff. She accepted the offer as a part-time children's minister as calling from God.

Although Brenda just recently joined the church staff, she has been working over the last five years with a great intergenerational group of volunteers who make the mission-minded ministry of FUMC Monticello shine each Sunday morning and Wednesday night.

Each volunteer brings a special gift to the children outside of a normal lesson. One may have a gift of conducting a children's choir, while another leads hand-bells, and still another with bilingual abilities to reach all of the kiddos. Parents who have children in the program bring their expertise to the classroom with creative hands-on activities.

When asked how she gets such a wide generational range in her volunteer teaching staff, Wright quickly responds that we all want the same thing for the children. We want the children of Monticello to know the love of Christ. We want them to have learning experiences that last their lifetime. We want them to have the church family that we all experienced growing up. The church family that we have with each other right now.

"We are all close. We even have our adult small groups as multi-generational as our volunteer teachers. It is what we do here at FUMC Monticello because we all have something to offer. The only time we know or show our age is when our bodies stop us from doing what our hearts want us to be doing," Wright said.

Brenda's relationships grow stronger each year with her Children's Ministry volunteers as they have twice-a-year planning meetings where everyone has a say and carries out their classroom duties.

Brenda was unable to attend this year's conference event called Quest due to her need to be at another church commitment. However, it was of no concern to her because she knew that she just needed to do the paperwork sign-ups for Quest, print the Quest directions and hand them over to her team. Her team of volunteers brought eight kids from their church. Because they had almost an equal number of volunteer chaperones, Monticello First was one of the churches that received the award for most in attendance from one church.

Brenda feels beyond blessed to have such a dedicated and reliable group of volunteers. The children will soon know, if they don't already, that they literally have generations of God's loved poured over them every time they are with their church family.

Little Oaks, Big Dreams

Mabelvale's ballpark needs help. The local UMC is working to give them a community space again

By Sam Pierce

Featured Contributor, @sjamespierce

Blair Ragsdale has only ever been thrown out of one ballpark in her life.

“An umpire and I got into it one evening and he tossed me,” she said. “There are a lot of good memories over there. I’m 68 and I have spent many an hour with my children when they were growing up — it was a good time.

“I’d like the children now to have that same experience.”

Ragsdale currently serves on the board of directors for the Mabelvale Youth Association, which is working towards restoring the Little Oaks Ballpark.

“We are trying to give the kids a place that is safe and a family atmosphere,” Ragsdale said. “We want to see the community kids be involved in something that is healthy and it motivates them to be a better family — better parents.”

She said there are quite a few children in the area that need help, desperately.

“The family situation is not good in our area. Our goal is to get a safe place, somewhere close, where they can go and play ball and have an area to play,” Ragsdale said.

She said a local group donated 18 acres that are adjacent to the ball fields, and eventually, the goal is to put in soccer fields and have a sports complex for this area near Little Rock. Ragsdale said, right now, children have to travel 30 miles to play ball, in any direction.

“There isn’t any place close for these children,” she said.

“Hopefully, we can get the ball fields up and going, even if it is just for day games.

“We have been working on this for about two years now. The church has held fundraisers, but it is going to take time and effort to get this ballpark open. It is going to take a lot of help and prayers.

“Hopefully, we can get one or two fields where the kids can play during the day.”

Ragsdale is also a member of Mabelvale United Methodist Church, which sits across the street from the ball fields.

“This is a community-owned park, it is not owned by the city,” Ragsdale said. “We want to get some community interest in getting it going, and we need help with some of the projects.

“We have to repair fences, and the bleachers all need to be painted and done. We are in desperate need of finances and volunteers — of course, that is probably everybody these days.”

Mabelvale UMC pastor Bob Marble remembers standing out in front of the church a while back surveying the demographics, and there, two blocks from the east parking lot, stood Little Oaks Ball Park, in “dire need of being brought back to life.”

“I had a meeting with our director of outreach, Blair, and we discussed the possibilities of it being a place that is safe for our community’s children and families,” he said. “I then met with our city director, Joan Adcock, and when I told her our church’s plan to revitalize the park, she became excited.”

“It continues to be a work in progress. It isn’t where I would have it wanted it to be. I wanted us to have teams in place and playing this past summer. But I have learned to be patient and God does things in his time.”

He said when he and Ragsdale told the congregation about their idea of revitalizing it for children and their families, the congregation jumped right in.

“Our children that live in our community have no place to play,” he said. “They have our playground at the church, but our children need avenues on which to spend their energies and a safe place to do it. The park is necessary.”

She said the church has partnered with the city and hosted community workdays and spent a whole day cleaning and mowing the grass in an effort to beautify the park once more.

“Our biggest goal is to get lights for the fields,” she said. “Our lighting is not safe for the children, but to put lights on those fields, is going to cost $350,000 — which is a goal we may or may not hit.”

Mabelvale Baseball League was founded in 1956 and began with one field. A second field was constructed in 1958 and a third was constructed in 1965. In 1994, the concession stand was vandalized and was reconstructed to its current design.

She said in 2001, the Little League field was renovated by Billy Smith and in appreciation of his contributions, the field was renamed as Billy Smith Field.

“Originally, Mabelvale Youth Association, the governing board, was established to start and oversee the park,” Ragsdale said. “A separate board, Little Oaks Ballpark board, was established under that board to manage the day-to-day park activities.

“This worked well for more than 50 years, then the establishing board members aged, moved or passed away, therefore there was no oversight of the Little Oaks Ballpark board.”

She said the Little Oaks Ballpark board eventually disbanded, leaving one person and that person left without naming anyone in charge — leaving the ballpark vacant.

“We have begun talks with the city in hopes of utilizing the park for game day picnics for our families,” she said. “A local electrical company has offered to hang lighting and move existing light poles for our evening games.”

In September of 2017, more than 100 volunteers, including former players at the park, came and assisted with the clean up of the park.

“We haven’t branched out real big,” she said. “But, when we do ask, we get quite a bit of response — it is kind of surreal.

“The stuff we need to do is large, but all the same things that can be done, the community has really pitched in.”

Marble said one member has come forward and said, once the park is fully functional, he will buy all the balls, bats, and gloves for children whose families can’t afford to buy them.

“If a family cannot afford a glove, we want to be able to provide it for them,” Ragsdale said. “These ball fields are designed for any child to play ball.

“We wanted it to be a true community, neighborhood-type ballpark.”

Ragsdale said when they first started on this project, they organized a ball camp and got one field playable for children in the community.

“Our church donated bats, balls, and gloves and we had them at the park every Saturday, instructing them on how to play ball,” Ragsdale said. “We had a little bit of a summer camp last year.”

She said Mabelvale UMC is really community-oriented and she works really close with the elementary children.

“It just seemed right, because these kids don’t have anywhere else to go,” she said. “My son played out here, my husband played out there growing up. It has always been a part of the community.

“We want to have that community feel, that they can have fun, play ball and have the families together. We are trying to get everybody to sit down, have dinner together and be involved in the community.”

ARUMC, UMCOR Announce 2020 Disaster Response Academy

By Janice Mann
Disaster Response Coordinator

Arkansas Conference/UMCOR Disaster Response Academy

This conference-wide mega training event is for anyone wanting to help build capacity for Arkansas United Methodists' response to disaster events. The academy focuses on being prepared to help because disasters don't schedule appointments. Attendees will spend 12 p.m. Wednesday through 12 p.m. Saturday with UMCOR staff and consultants, conference leadership and others in training and discussion. We will dive deep into the areas that frame all disaster ministries while affirming or enhancing how our conference prepares for, responds to, and recovers from disasters.

What if disaster response is a way to transform the world for Jesus Christ? Central to the goal of this academy is our desire to grow and enhance the ministry of disaster response for the transformation of Arkansas and beyond. Come prepared to learn, to better understand how disaster response ministry works, and to make the work of our local churches, districts, and the conference in disaster response even better!

Your presence at Trinity UMC the last week in January is critical! Please register early at:

AR River Flood Update

The transition from relief to recovery has been daunting after the AR River Flood. There is a wide range of situations in the different areas affected along the river. Long Term Recovery Groups are up and working in the AR/OK River Valley area (six affected counties) and in Pulaski County. The other areas are on hold or struggling for various reasons. We have developed a Plan B and a Plan C to continue the recovery effort in those areas. Four United Methodist case managers are sharing two full-time positions to cover 3.5 of five affected areas. There are two additional case managers working in partnership with them to cover the other 1.5. Unmet needs are being identified and resources allocated to meet those needs through the case management process.

All this is made possible through donations to the conference and UMCOR after the flood. UMCOR has provided two grants after the flood to support the recovery efforts. Two additional grants were received by the Arkansas Conference as a trusted partner, one of which is designated for use in the four counties affected in Southeast AR. Current river flood recovery work projects include a rebuild in Perry and a replacement that needs access porches and steps in Houston. We are seeking volunteers to help with these two projects. As more projects are ready we will announce the volunteer needs through email and Facebook posts as well as conference communications.

Other Updates

A roof has been replaced on a home in Sebastian County after the tornado there back in the spring.

Two Boone County tornado home replacements have been built. We have had teams and partners working there. The Jefferson County tornado and Marion County tornado projects have closed with all identified needs met. Flash flooding has affected Crawford, Sebastian and Hempstead Counties since the River flood. One replacement home has been provided in Hempstead and there are three open cases in Crawford/Sebastian.

Current In-Conference projects:

- Recovery efforts are ongoing after several disaster events across the state.
- ECHO Village – construction of homes and facilities, Eureka Springs.

Right: After a Hempstead County flash flood, Disaster Response worked to replace a home that was destroyed. Southwest District Coordinator Dan Rohrbaugh and a team from FUMC Hope helped build an access ramp for the home.
